III. Teaching and Learning Process (Experiences)

Model: 5E Instructional Model
Total time allotment: 90 minutes

PRELIMINARIES (5 minutes)

The teacher will begin the lesson with a short prayer, followed by checking attendance. To promote a productive and respectful learning environment, the online classroom rules will be reviewed with the students. A brief recap of the previous lesson on Protecting Our Endangered Species will be conducted to refresh students' memory and establish connections to today's topic.

A. ENGAGE (15 minutes)

To introduce the new lesson on Promoting Cooperation of the Family in Maintaining Peace in the Community, the teacher will present a quote from Confucius:

"If there is righteousness in the heart, there will be beauty in the character. If there is beauty in the character, there will be harmony in the home. If there is harmony in the home, there will be order in the nations. When there is order in the nations, there will be peace in the world."

The students will be asked to reflect on the quote and answer the following HOTS questions:

1. How can the values practiced within a family influence peace and cooperation in the wider community? Student's answer may vary

2. In what ways can you personally contribute to promoting harmony and order in your family and community? Student's answer may vary

The teacher will randomly select four representatives, two girls and two boys to share their answers. Students may take turns responding using their microphones.

B. EXPLORE (15 minutes)

Through an activity called "Building Our Peace Mural," the teacher will divide the class into four groups. Each group will use Canva to create a digital illustration that represents their answer to the question: "What is peace to you?" Each group will also choose a team name based on their interpretation of peace. Their mural should clearly illustrate their ideas and visually answer the question.

While creating their murals, students will reflect on the following questions: how their mural shows ways a family can promote peace in the home or community, which actions illustrated can their own family realistically do, and how practicing these actions impacts their family, neighbors, or community. Students will be given 7 minutes to complete their work.

After the time is up, the teacher will randomly select one representative from each group to explain their team's creation and answer the reflection questions. The teacher may highlight key points during the presentations to emphasize the connection between family actions, community cooperation, and overall peace.

C. EXPLAIN (20 minutes)

The teacher will proceed with the lesson proper starting with a smooth transition from the explore phase.

The students will define peace. Their definitions will be challenged by the teacher with follow-up questions.

E.g.

Student: Peace is the absence of noise
Teacher: Is a noisy house an "unpeaceful" house?

- Noise is not always bad. Noise is natural, and a part of the human experience.

Student: Okay, then peace is the absence of chaos!
Teacher: Then is a chaotic house an "unpeaceful" house?

- Like noise, chaos is natural to humans. A house can have a chaotic, and rowdy bunch of members but still be peaceful.

Student: Then, peace is the absence of discord!
Teacher: So any disagreement means peace is broken?

- Disagreements happen all the time. It is natural in society for different people with different views to have clashing ideas.

The teacher will end the questioning with one last question:

"What really is peace?"

Peace is a term that has been defined in countless ways. From the ancient Greeks, to the catholics, up to the now. Oftentimes, peace is something we recognize by its absence i.e. we know better when something is not peaceful as compared to recognizing a peaceful time. Generally speaking, however, peace can be defined as a state of harmony arising from the absence of any significant feelings of fear or of want. In society this translates to its citizens being able to enjoy freedom from any form of violence, fear, and danger. Additionally, societal peace is attained when its structures are fair and just, human rights and freedoms of all citizens are respected, the rule of law upheld, and the community stays united in harmony despite diversity.

According to St.Paul VI in the document Populorum Progressio (The Development of Peoples) issued in 1967, another term for peace is "development". According to him, when development is neglected, when economic progress is not inclusive, people will unleash their fury.

E.g. When family business goes well, everyone in the family is in harmony. When the business starts failing, cracks start to appear.

With the development definition in mind, maintaining peace in the community also demands the development of everyone involved. With families as the basic unit of barangays, this development, thus, involves the cooperation of each unit in the following:

1. Peace-building - An activity that aims to resolve injustice in nonviolent ways and to transform the cultural and structural conditions that generate destructive conflict.
2. Building a culture of peace - Instilling peace as a product of virtuous behavior.
3. Peace education - Participatory holistic process that includes teaching for and about democracy and human rights, nonviolence, social, and economic justice, gender inequality, environmental sustainability, disarmament, traditional peace practices, international law, and human security.

Building on point 2, building a culture of peace starts within the family. As the first formator of virtues, and good disposition, the family is responsible for raising its children to be peace-loving citizens. Considering that it is the main unit of communities, a peaceful community must, therefore, be composed of peaceful families. Peace must exist in the smallest units so it can affect the larger structure, and different strategies exist to improve the peace of a community such as:

1. Creating an atmosphere of unity, cooperation, and mutual respect with the neighborhood;
2. leading by example;
3. encouraging other families to get involved in meaningful community activities; and
4. promoting quality of life.

D. ELABORATE (15 minutes)

The teacher will move on to the next phase of the lesson. In this phase, the teacher will ask the students:

"What does your family do to maintain peace in your neighborhood?"

The teacher will have the students list down 3 things that their family does to maintain harmony in their neighborhood. Furthermore, they will be asked to elaborate as to why their families do that in the first place.

The students will be answering this individually in an A4 pdf form, to be submitted as their exit ticket, and as proof of attendance.

E. EVALUATE (15 minutes)

The teacher checks students' understanding through google forms. The teacher shares a Google Form link with the class. The questions are found in Part IV, in the learning assessment.
